Dr Thiago R. Oliveira

PERSONAL SUMMARY

I am Lecturer in the Department of Criminology at the University of Manchester. I am a quantitative criminologist who draws on theories from sociology, psychology, and social policy to investigate the relationship between exposures to policing and social outcomes. My research mostly relies on procedural justice theory, the theory of legal cynicism, and social disorganisation theory to investigate how exposure to neighbourhood characteristics and police behaviour can influence cultural perceptions about the law and legal authority using methods from quantitative social social science, causal inference, and data science.
